An Evening Echo.

Make it a rule, and pray God to help you keep it, never, if possible, to lie down at night without being able to say, "I have made one human being at least a little wiser, a little happier or a little better this day."
—CHARLES KINGSLEY.

It takes eternal vigilance and perhaps something else to outwit the American youngster. It has been discovered that small boys on Long Island, N. Y., have been establishing "breeding places for flies to be swatted for the rewards offered by enthusiastic housewives' leagues. Rewards for the eradication of fly breeding places will now have to be offered else the fly crusade will be a long drawn out affair.

The fact that more than 100,000 different requests have already been made for tickets of admission to the Republican national convention in Chicago indicates that it will be far and away the biggest show of the year, or for a number of years for that matter. No such great demand has been made for tickets to the Democratic national convention in Baltimore, but that is probably because very few persons can afford to go up against the hotel combine there.

Beware of Canards.

Voters who will cast ballots at the Republican primaries next Tuesday are sensibly warned by the Parkersburg Dispatch-News against the canards and "roorbacks" that may be sprung at the eleventh hour on the candidacies of persons who are seeking nominations. There has been a hope that such tactics through their worthlessness and injury had become obsolete, but the Parkersburg newspaper opines that they have been of too long standing and too deeply imbedded in human nature as to be entirely eradicated as yet. It may be well to remember that if there is any truth in last-minute campaign charges, it would have been brought forth long before the final stage. Says the Dispatch-News:

Come we now to that primary election eve where the credulous and unsophisticated of politics should beware. It is the time for false reports to circulate, slanderous rumors to offend the ear, canards, roorbacks, falsehoods, libels, contemptible gossip and all the tricks of an unscrupulous candidate or his agents to be used to set aside an honestly formed judgment deliberately arrived at after mature and intelligent consideration.

It was too much to hope that this fashion of so many years' vogue, would change this year, although there were favorable signs of improvement; it is of too long standing and too deeply imbedded in human nature. And so we are having a recurrence of this nuisance. It will be well, therefore, for the individual Republican voter to avoid these traps that are set for him. Let him remember that an enlightened mind is never hoodwinked; to be entrapped thus would cast doubt upon his possession of a rational intelligence.

All the candidates who will be voted upon at next Tuesday's primary have been before the public long enough for it to know all about them. They have made speeches which have been published, they have been widely interviewed, their press agents have done skillful work in exploiting them, editors have discussed them, and there has been no scarcity of either fact or fiction concerning them. No voter ought to be in doubt as to the private character and public record of any one of them, his fitness for the position to which he aspires, and all other things about him which the public should know before it nominates or elects any man.

Nor do we believe that there is any one qualified to cast a ballot in the primary who lacks sufficient information upon which to act in making his selections. There is no question in our mind, but the majority of the members of the party in the state have long before this time made up their minds whom they shall vote for. Their decision has been formed calmly, deliberately, upon full and complete information at hand, and with the idea of doing what in their view is the very best thing to do for the party's welfare and the public weal. That being the case, the voter should not allow himself to be swayed from his own opinion by the eleventh-hour tactics and tricks practiced to mislead him and to impose upon him.

The wise thing to do from now on is to turn a deaf ear to the political scandal-monger and liar, and cast your own ballot in your own way, which is the way you have days ago determined to cast it.

Workingman's Friend.

Dr. H. D. Hatfield, candidate for nomination for governor of West Virginia, is a friend to the workingman and there can be no mistake about it. Here is an estimate of him as such given by H. E. Beahore, a citizen of Wellsburg, and those who read it will entertain no doubt as to Dr. Hatfield's friendly attitude toward workingmen:

"Well, if there ever was a man who has been and is today a friend of the workingman, Dr. Hatfield fills the bill, and if you want to know more about him, I will just tell you how it is. I used to work as an engineer and brakeman on the freight down on the Norfolk and Western railroad, and there was not a railroad man in that whole section of country that would not stop the train, no difference when or where, to let Dr. Hatfield on or off as he went about like a good Samaritan on his errands of mercy and helpfulness.

"It was well known by all that no difference whether a man or a woman had any money or whether they were ever likely to have any, let them become sick or injured and out into the storm he would go, frequently knowing at the time that he would never receive a cent and is it any wonder that everybody knew him and that everybody loved this kind, self-sacrificing physician and friend?

"Once, when I was braking on the Norfolk and Western, I got in a smashup and had both legs and one arm broken. A physician in the neighborhood was brought by some one and I had consciousness enough to remember Dr. Hatfield and said: 'I want him to come,' and true as an angel of mercy he came. The old doctor said: 'Hatfield, we'll have to take that leg off; there's no use in fooling; it can't be saved.' I remember Dr. Hatfield's answer, and it was something like this: 'Well, now, I just believe that leg can be saved, and we will make some kind of a leg out of it,' and he put all of the shattered bones together; stayed right by me for two nights and a day, and I'll just show you how it looks.' Do you see anything wrong with that? Not a knot even. He was not the company physician either.

"Once, when we stopped the freight to let him on, he climbed up beside me and as he had on a light suit (and he did look fine) I suggested that he had better sit on the other side, for my clothes were all greasy. 'No,' he said, 'If you don't mind, I'll just sit up here by you. I'm not afraid of dirt.' The old engine was going some faster than she ought to have been around those curves. She was throwing smoke and dust to beat the band, and when we stopped to let him off, you would hardly have known the handsome big man. Yes, big is the word—big in every way.

"I remember him when he first commenced to practice at Duncress, W. Va.; he was the same then as he is now—a friend, neighbor, a good, genial, wholesome man, and one whom when you come to know him (and it don't take long) you never can forget or cease to admire and respect and you can trust him to the utmost."

Jesse Haggerty was here Saturday from Sardis on business.

last considerations will result in a favorable reply to the American invitation. How great a representation and whether a general one, embracing all aspects of German business and manufacturing life, will be made, depends largely on the attitude taken by the department of the treasury and particularly by the emperor on his return. His Majesty's influence is confidently expected to be thrown into the scale for a thoroughly adequate and representative display.

The government, despite a series of failures in its repressive measures against the Poles, has by no means lost courage and it is now asking the Reichstag for an appropriation of $25,000,000 to be used in keeping lands now owned by Germans out of the hands of the Poles. Several million dollars has heretofore been used in the effort, but without appreciable effect, for in the five years from 1906 to 1911 more than 1,000,000 acres of land in East Prussia, Pomerania and Silesia passed from German into Polish ownership. A similar danger, but of less importance, is conceived to threaten the Germans in Northern Schleswig, where the Danes are slowly getting hold of land, despite the fact that a majority of them are denied the privilege of citizenship by Germany.

The fund asked by the government is to be administered by a special commission, which will buy threatened farm properties and either lease or sell them to German citizens on easy terms. These contracts of sale are to contain clauses providing for a heavy money penalty in case the lands are sold to Poles, making such a sale out of the question.

An amusing balloon episode is reported from Eichstaedt, a town of 8,000 population in southern Germany, which in order to witness a much desired ascent allowed the balloon to be filled from the municipal gas supply. The ascent was made successfully, but when night came the residents found that the entire contents of the gasometer had gone into the bag. Candles and oil lamps furnished all the light in the town that night.

new construction account to take care of additional extensions and improvements authorized by the board, and at the close of the fiscal year, April 15, 1912, there remained a cash balance in the hands of the treasurer amounting to $12,332.85. The maintenance of the sewerage system while quite a heavy tax on the department shows the expenditures over receipts to be only $468.64.

The members of the board, Truman J. Lynch, William H. Lewis and John O. Brooks, are active, competent, successful business men who have given the affairs pertaining to the water supply their best attention and as a result the business of the department is being intelligently administered and the interests of the water patrons well conserved.

ACQUITTED

Of Alleged Attempt to Poison Boy is Richard Bell, of Industrial.

Richard Bell, a horse trader of Industrial, was acquitted late Friday afternoon in Justice G. H. Gordon's court of a charge of feloniously attempting to poison Dorsey Howell, thirteen-year-old son of Mrs. Lucy Howell, of the same place, by giving him "poke root" to eat for horse radish. It was shown at the hearing that both Bell and the boy ate the poke root by mistake and that both were taken deathly ill as a result. The boy's mother instituted the proceedings against Bell.

Dysentery is always serious and often a dangerous disease, but it can be cured. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has cured it even when malignant and epidemic. For sale by all dealers.

LIVED ON RAW EGGS

Mr. Richard's Experience With Different Diets. Peaches and Buttermilk for Three Years.

Cecilton, Md.—Mr. George Richards of this place, during the past 12 years has probably tried more different diets than the average person would ever use in a lifetime.

What he has to say about his experiments, must therefore be highly interesting to anyone suffering from indigestion or stomach troubles of any kind.

He says: "For more than 12 years I suffered with stomach troubles, and paid hundreds of dollars for doctor bills and medicines. I was also operated on for piles.

I lived on dried peaches and buttermilk for nearly three years. The only thing that would not give me pain was raw eggs.

I was a physical wreck. I could not sleep, and was as near crazy as a man could well be.

I must say that after taking two 25-cent packages of Theodor's Black-Draught, it did me more good than all I ever spent for other medicines.

I have been working daily on the farm ever since, and I am as hard as iron. This purely vegetable remedy has been in successful use for more than 70 years. Try it. But be sure that it's "Theodor's."

BETTER THAN SPANKING.

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers Box W, Notre Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.
